About Me

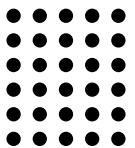

I, Nelson Ortega Toscano, was born on March 11, 1963, in Tibú, Norte de Santander, Colombia. Tibú is located on the border with Venezuela in the lush region of the Colombian Catatumbo. My artistic training is completely self-taught, starting from the age of five when I painted a portrait of my older sister. Since settling in Bogotá in 2000, I have devoted myself to refining my technique and developing my unique style, which has gained significant recognition within the art community through exhibitions held in prestigious venues across the capital.

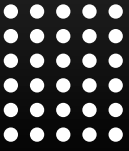

Currently, my artwork is displayed in various locations in the United States, Europe, and Asia, thanks to the representation provided by my art agents. They have played a pivotal role in establishing me as an internationally renowned artist.

About My Art

My style, "Magical Realism," characterized by bold and vibrant colors, reminiscent of the region where I come from. I take pride in capturing the essence of the jungle, which is my favorite subject matter. Within my paintings, I represent the distinct Colombian elements that shape our culture, including Andean landscapes and wild scenes of tropical fauna and flora. Through my artwork, I showcase the beauty of Colombian nature to the world, particularly the lush landscapes of the Catatumbo jungle. Rather than focusing on the unfortunate political conflicts in our country, I prefer to depict the awe-inspiring creations of God, the exotic nature teeming with diverse wildlife and flora.
